1897 Cyclone - damage at sea

On 6 January 1897 a "great hurricane" struck Darwin. The cyclone coincided with a high tide and caused a strong surge which hurled boats well ashore. Fifteen people died on the harbour. Eighteen of the 29 pearlng luggers then based in Darwin were wrecked, as were the government steam launch and three sampans. It was "a night of terrifying destructiveness" which one preacher asserted was "a gentle reminder from Providence that we are a very sinful people."
